CANAL Usually proves no turn: great problem to jump but it requires an immediate 90 degree pivot to the left on landing to get in line for the next. Second time round the field dig in as tight as possible as every yard saved at this point could be the difference between success and failure.

VALENTINE'S BROOK: The lesser of the two brook fences but no liberties are taken at the first circuit, once over time to relax a little as the field along towards the mighty Chair will be no respite next time.

THE CHAIR: With a six-foot wide ditch standing five-foot-two high, this represents a formidable of the Grand National fence added hazard of loose horses it rarely quots a casualty.

THE WATER JUMP: Comes quickly after end of the first circuit. It has a two and a twelve-foot six-inch sp keeping your feet dry seems FINAL FENCE: (Number 30): No letting up now would be tragic. After gruelling part of the race a mile (494y), calling on stamina and strength.

Greasepaint ready to go one better

By TONY SWEENEY

IT IS almost 40 years since 100-1 shot Caughoo defeated his compatriot Lough Conn in an Irish one-two in the Grand National.

But the Irish have not had a better chance than this year of doing it again. The team is headed by Greasepaint, who has proved his stamina and jumping ability by finishing second in the last two Nationals.

He is backed up by Drumlargin, who is not only the class horse of the field but arguably the best handicapper. Dermot Weld, who owns a quarter share in Greasepaint, has trained him all season with this single objective in mind.

He may not have won a race in the intervening 12 months, but few horses could, in the circumstances, have run a better final trial than he did at Naas last time out.

Competing over two miles, he was eating up the ground from the last fence to be beaten a mere two lengths by Kilikilowen.

Drumlargin meets Greasepaint on 8lb better terms than in the Irish Grand National. He lacks the Grand National experience of Greasepaint but has proved himself a very fine handicapper indeed. Two seasons ago he stormed up the hill at Sandown to win the Whitbread Gold Cup while last year he took third place to Burrough Hill Lad in the Tote Gold Cup.

Greasepaint and Drumlargin need no more than normal luck to dominate the finish today.
